Soghra Raei Abdolabadi

MAR 1, 1933 - FEB 13, 2017

Soghra Raei Abdolabadi, left us on March 13th, 2017. Born and raised in a small village near Tehran. She's known to her family as Naneneda and that name will be forever imprinted on the hearts of her children and the legacy she left behind. Naneneda has a different meaning and a different memory for everyone in her family but is unquestionably a reflection of the sacrifices she made, the strength of her commitment and a tireless resolve to hold her family together. Her legacy will live on through her beautiful and loving family which consist of her two daughters, 5 grandchildren and 2 great grandchildren. And one thing is for certain, Naneneda's dream that she sacrificed so much for will be successfully lived out through the legacy of her children.

I remember how much my grandmother loved my sisters cat, Sion. She would always be so bothered when the cat left her bed and wasn't around to bet pet by her. Ultimately she would try to fool the cat with something so the cat would come back onto her bed.I don't think I ever truly understood who my grandmother really was until this past year. Unfortunately she was very ill, but she was still very much herself. Her humor, passion for pets, her pickiness in what to eat, and her outrageous ideas and ways to express herself have been passed down to us as her grandchildren. The more you learn about your family, the more you learn how similar you can be to them.As a young teenager I was very ignorant and didn't understand the value of family. Now that my family is far away and spread around, I am deeply affected by all this. I will make sure that when I can to go and see all of my family as much as I can.Not to say that I didn't go to see my mother and grandmother when they lived 5 minutes away, in fact my wife and I loved to visit them regularly, but I am still regretting that we didn't visit them even more often..R.I.P Grandma SoghraYour children and grandchildren will make you very proud, promise!~Masih
