Danielle "Doodle Bug" Kieschnick

MAY 30, 1996 - MAY 20, 2024

Danielle Christine Kieschnick, cherished daughter, beloved sister, and dear friend to many, passed away in her sleep on May 20th, 2024. She was ten days away from her 28th birthday, a day she looked forward to as a step towards a new, better life for herself.

If Danielle "Doodle Bug" hadn't lit up your world within seconds of meeting her already, all you had to do was give her a few more minutes, and she'd have you cracking up with her witty yet extremely goofy personality. There was no denying that Danielle was a beautiful young woman, but more than anything, those who loved her remembered how she made them laugh. Even when you were trying to stay mad at her over a silly argument that neither of you would remember a day later, all she had to do was make one joke, and you'd be laughing harder than you ever had before. To her (amused) horror, she had picked up her dad, Audie's, habit of starting every corny joke with a drawn-out "Golly, man."

From the moment she was born, she had a stubborn streak that both parents swore up and down she had inherited from the other, but everyone secretly knew that stubbornness was uniquely Danielle. After all, she became 'Doodle Bug' because whenever her mom, Dana, tried to burp her, she'd curl into a ball and make the task just a teensy bit harder.

Danielle had a multitude of talents; she had a passion for drawing and writing poetry, sometimes gifting her creations to loved ones. She had entertained the idea of fame once or twice, but she eventually discovered a different calling. Danielle found her purpose in massage therapy and often spoke about her fulfillment in helping her clients. She dreamed of expanding her career to aid either athletes or animals - a decision she playfully left to be determined by which she found cuter when she was ready. Her sweet dog, Blu, probably would have preferred the latter, and knowing Danielle, she would have changed her entire career path if it had meant her puppy was happy.

I could write on and on about Dani. It's almost impossible to know where to begin or what to choose from the multitude of memories, messages or conversations. I will always remember her brilliant mind and sense of humor most. She was without a doubt the funniest person I have ever met and probably will ever meet. I remember when my best friend met her for the first time. I told her so many stories about him and she was so excited to meet this person she already was intimidated to meet because of how funny she thought he was. Within 30 minutes of hanging out they were making jokes together and we were all painfully cracking up together. I watched her grow more and more confident in saying silly things that made my friend and I genuinely double over. She had left the room briefly and my best friend looked at me and said to me, "buddy, I always thought you and I were the funniest people we each knew but I'm starting to think it may be her". He was exactly right, she was a genius and I was in constant awe of the depth of understanding she had for everything. We all went to dinner one night and I was stressed over a work project and was being a bit quiet. I felt her hand gently touch my arm and I looked over at her to see a face of such genuine love and concern that I've absolutely never experienced before. Later that evening my friend said to me, I've known you almost all our lives and I've never seen someone look at you like that and show you so much love and concern. She gave me so much confidence and belief in joy. She was too good for this world and I always felt completely humbled to hold even a moment of her attention. She was perfect, absolutely perfect. To say she will be missed is an understatement. She will never be forgotten, will always come up in conversation, and we will always have a Dani story to share at any given moment. She will live on because she's impossible to forget. I never will. I love you, sugar.
