Gordo, you were one of the purest, kindest souls I've ever known. You had such an infectious laugh and such a beautiful smile. Thank you for being my friend, I was truly blessed to have you in my life. This news broke me and I am still in shock and disbelief. Your love of travel and life was inspiring to so many, including myself. We will miss you more than you could know. Rest easy my friend.

I was determined to teach Gordon the art of brewing good coffee and introduce him to the essentials of this craft; he was willing and a good student. He listened and nodded whenever I told him about different coffee beans and roasting levels, the times we shared coffee, or when I showed him how to use the French press. Needless to say, all this was just an excuse to get together, talk about life, and the crazy weather that stormed Mexico City by surprise this year. I will miss you, Gordon. Gracias por las charlas, consejos y buenos momentos.

Tho I don't have many memories with Gordon, the ones I do have are lasting. I will always remember when my dad brought you to visit. I remember thinking that you were the coolest person I had ever met ❤️ you played Barbie's with me and you were so kind and your joy was infectious. As adults spending time together when you came to Montana and to Massachusetts for Ronnie's wedding. I always enjoyed chatting with you online about your travels, sweet Bruno, my kiddos and my husband. I thank you for speaking with Zayah about his career path and giving him advice ❤️ . I will watch your skirts with Bruno with a heavy heart as well as gratitude that I had the pleasure of knowing you ❤️ You are missed immensely Gordon ☐☐

I first met Gordon in middle school, we sat next to each other in homeroom. Through the years, we both moved around, and found new places to call home, but stayed in touch. We always made it a point to hang out, regardless of where either of us lived. I recently visited Gordon in Mexico City earlier this year. He was as happy as ever, excited to start another chapter in his adventurous life. Gordon was joyful, kind, funny, optimistic, and always curious to learn new things. His zest for life was truly inspiring. He had a beaming smile, and an infectious laugh that could brighten up any room. He will be missed.

I met Gordon (Gordy) in 2011 when my husband, Kevin, and I, moved to Austin, Texas. I met Gordon at work and we worked together a lot. We eventually became great friends and partied together quite a bit, at our place, his, or at our local watering holes. Kevin worked with him on his book cover designs and we spent many late nights photographing and editing type and design. I love how much he loved life, how kind and selfless he was, how much he loved my food, and how easy-going and enlightened he was spiritually and practically. He was a great man. I especially loved his wanderlust and sense of adventure. I will miss him terribly, but I know his energy will continue to soar. Love you, Gordon!

"My name is Gordon Joseph Akinsoji Akinpelu." That was his introduction on that warm afternoon of December 1982, after the bear hugs. This stuck with me. Gordon was a loving & jovial cousin (though we related like brothers). He visited Ibadan, Nigeria in 1982 & 1990, and we both had fun in the neighbourhood as young boys - street football, hide & seek, and turns on his Nintendo - Super Mario. I showed him off to everyone in the neighbourhood. Decades later, I hosted him on his visits to London, England, and my late mom was so happy to see him again during one of his visits, 20yrs since his last visit to Nigeria. He was my little brother, and he was the realest & coolest, anyone could ever ask for. His life was a message - be real to yourself! 🙏 Gordon wanted fun out of life. That meant having control on how lived life, what he did with life, without burdening his family & friends. His travels & adventures gave him that, and I believe he ticked most things on his bucket list. He shared his concerns with me about life, and I gave my thoughts on some of his concerns. He promised his commitment to follow his dreams. He was passionate and optimistic about the future. His words are valuable. I remember telling him my mom would fly in to London from Nigeria on a particular date, and Gordon said "let me see if I can find a flight down there to see y'all". He called back few days later that I should pick him up at Heathrow. He had a list of places he wants to visit in London. His deep knowledge on historical sites is amazing. Thank you for the Thanksgiving experience and hospitality. Gordon, your young nieces will miss their favourite Uncle. Tosin will forever miss her gentleman brother-in-law. Me? I now believe I should've called instead of texting on 8th November. Maybe today would've been different. Nevertheless, I'm sure you're now in a much more better realm. I cherish your sweet memories and the positive impact. Sleep well, my brother, till we meet again on resurrection morning. 🙏👤 Tokunbo Ishola.

Sharing a single memory of Gordon is impossible. His laughter and smile made everyone feel welcome and a bit happier. I got to share a raft with him in the whitewaters of Colorado for my 30th, a road trip to and a hike in Palo Duro Canyon, a funny moment being interviewed at Cadillac Ranch, a beer in Denver, pancakes in Amsterdam, and so many fun chats and discussions in Austin. I introduced him to a girl who he dated for about a week! Gordon also let me write an entry for his children's book series ("Monty the Mole Down Unda"). He has inspired me in times when I don't know what I'm doing in life. I will certainly miss his videos of positivity and exploration in everyday life. He'd always "get a wild hair" to take a trip somewhere (which is why I saw him in Amsterdam)... I'm going to miss you being around for that, amigo! Thanks for being a friend.
